General Villa expressed his inten tion to confiscate the money which the fugitives were reported to have withdrawn from the banks before the evacuation. He said he would protect the non-combatants, except such as were considered political offenders. Members of the Terrazas family were placed by him in the later class.

Crowds of people with automobiles camped at Presidio, Texas, opposite Ojinaga, in anticipation that the refugees, including the federals, would cross the river. Should the federals, disheartened by their long siege in Chihuahua and by the decision of General Mercado to flee because of the bankrupt condition of his army, decide to cross, they would give up their arms on the Mexican side.

Rebels reported that part of the fugitives had turned to the west and were aproaching Palomas on the border opposite Columbus, N. M. With them were said to be Generals Jose Salazar and Pascual Orozco, both of neutrality laws.
